Dear JUSTIN Wine Connoisseurs,

Having had such a splendid time cruising Alaska, I invite you to set sail again! This time I've got my sight set on the incomparable Baltic Sea and St. Petersburg. I haven't told my wife yet, the announcement is going to be her Valentine's gift. With free air, Silversea's all-inclusive luxury suites, and destinations we've only dreamed about visiting, I can't imagine a more desirable way to visit Russia; Silversea even handles the Russian visa*. I'm sure my wife is going to love this gift. She doesn't need to know it was 60% off!

Please join me at sea as I host vertical tastings, receptions, winemaker dinners, and offer other pairings and insight into the wine world for our private group. Perhaps with a little time and luck we'll even be able to compare some of the region's world renowned vodkas, it might not feel like a trip to Russia without it!

~ Joseph Spellman, MS

Destinations

Founded in the 13th century, Stockholm is Sweden's strikingly elegant and beautiful capital, spread out over many islands at the meeting point of the Baltic with Lake Mälaren. Stockholm, noted for its outstanding architecture, is one of Scandinavia's most attractive cities. In addition to its many man-made monuments, Stockholm boasts a world of natural beauty. One third of the city's total land area is devoted to parks. The Swedes are proud of their country and take great care to preserve its great natural beauty. As the country's major city, Stockholm offers a wealth of monuments and sites, fine museums and a rich culture. There are also hundreds of excellent restaurants and trendy boutiques.

Often referred to as the "Pearl of the Baltic," the near, clean city of Helsinki on Finland's southern coast is known for its impressive architecture, wide boulevards and beautiful harbor. Founded in 1550, Helsinki was appointed as the country's capital in 1812. After a devastating fire, Helsinki was totally rebuilt, mostly in the neo-classical, Empire style. An outstanding example of this impressive architecture can be seen around the grand Senate Square, dominated by the exquisite Tuomio Kirkko Church at one end and the onion domes of the Russian Orthodox Uspenski Cathedral at the eastern end. The city is full of wonderful museums, displaying everything from art to architectural design. The colorful harbour front has a lively market. The Esplanadi leads north into Mannerheimintie, the city's main thoroughfare named after the military commander and statesman, C.G.E. Mannerheim.

Founded by Peter the Great in 1703, St. Petersburg became the designated capital of Imperial Russia from 1712 to 1914 and has remained the country's cultural capital. This gateway to the West and a distinctly European metropolis with baroque and neo-classical mansions. St. Petersburg's new cultural life attracted such great figures as Pushkin, Dostoyevsky, Tchaikovsky and Tolstoy. St. Petersburg is Russia's second largest city and the country's principal seaport. It boasts opulent palaces, fine theatres and ballet companies, as well as some of the world's best art museums. Many of the city's monuments represent an important facet of the country's rich historical and cultural heritage. The legendary Hermitage contains some of the world's most magnificent art treasures, including a unique collection of jewelry in the Gold and Diamond Rooms.

Estonia's capital, Tallinn, lies just 53 miles (85 km) from Helsinki across the Gulf of Finland, midway between St. Petersburg and Stockholm. Estonia is surrounded by water. The country's 17,000 square miles (27,200 sq. km) include a staggering 800 islands and more than 1,500 lakes. Water sports are quite popular during the summer months and fishing is a national pastime. The Old Town, with its cobbled streets and 13th- and 14th-century buildings, attracts thousands of visitors each year. They come to admire the city's heritage of medieval buildings, the imposing Town Hall that dates back to 1454, the Orthodox Cathedral, Toompea Castle and Oleviste Church – all prominent architectural landmarks.

Wonderful Copenhagen is a city of canals, copper-roofed buildings and manicured parks. This famous Baltic seaport is one of Europe's loveliest capitals and the seat of the oldest monarchy in the world. Home to a quarter of Denmark's population, Copenhagen is a focus for commerce, culture, industry and cosmopolitan atmosphere.. Its impressive theaters, museums and churches are of interest to many visitors; the best-loved attractions include the world-famous Tivoli Gardens, the Langelinie Harbor with its statue of The Little Mermaid, and the busy shopping promenade known as Strøget. Shopping and dining opportunities are endless.
